ONLY A VARIETY ACTOR. A RECITATION.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY MARK MEREDITH.

Ah! the critics may give him a sneer,
The legitimate actor a jibe;
They may say that his methods are queer,
When his efforts to please they describe.
But the man who can lighten our care
Is a benefit unto his kind,
For the world has much trouble to spare—
Unto this we are none of us blind!

A variety actor—go look
At a benefit bill, the year 'round;
You will find him in some little nook,
For his heart is quite honest and sound.
He is willing to give of his best
For humanity's generous sake!
And there's many a home he has blest
That has suffered from Poverty's ache!

Then a truce to the jibe and the jeer!
Let our praise be bestowed on the man!
They are still to humanity dear
Who for aye do the best that they can!
There's a part for us all here to play,
While we travel the circuit of Time,
And it isn't the part—but the way
That we act it, which makes life sublime!

THE ICE PALACE.

WRITTEN AFTER THE FRENCH FOR THE NEW YORK
CLIPPER,
BY D. M. WINTHROP.

In a boudoir furnished with extravagant and refined luxury a young woman, with steel blue eyes, reclined upon a low divan covered with a large bear skin. A handsome man, with the manner of a great lord, stood with his back to the Dutch fire place, and toyed with the golden hair of the charming woman.

The young woman was the wife of Wolinski, Councillor of State, and the adorer of the moment was the Duke of Courlande, the all-powerful favorite of the Czarina Ann.

"Duke, do me a little service," said the ravishing blonde.

"Anything you wish, Alexina."
"Well, you must send my husband to Siberia; he is the pest of my life—a good enough man in his way," she added, with a wicked leer, "but such an ass!"

The Duke burst out laughing.
"With the greatest pleasure!" he cried, "just as soon as you furnish me with a plausible pretext. But prudence is necessary. We other Germans are already hated too much in Russia. We must be on our guard, for these damned candle eaters would only too willingly cut our throats, if a good opportunity offered, when they might do so with impunity!"

"Pugh!" ejaculated the coquette, with a shrug of her beautiful shoulders—"don't let that worry you, my dear Duke. As for me, I could twist them all around my thumb. However, that's neither here nor there. Will you do me the service I have to ask of you?"

"I have already told you, ma belle, that it would afford me the greatest pleasure—only, as I said, you must furnish me with a plausible pretext."

The pretty woman gave a little pout.
"It seems that Wolinski suspects my love for you; he begins to annoy me by his insinuations."

"Ah, my dear, we must find a better pretext than that!" said the Duke, with a sardonic smile. "Put on your thinking cap, and by the time I see you again you will doubtless have found what you need to rid you of your dear lord!"

The siren gave a harsh laugh, and tapped the floor with her shapely slippered foot.

"Where there's a will there's a way," she murmured then. "We shall see!"

From that day forward the beautiful German began to seek the pretext with the indefatigable zeal of a huntress. She surrounded her husband with so many snares that he became, after a fashion, her prisoner, and now nothing remained for her to do but to deliver him up to the executioner. Carefully disguised and veiled, she reached the Duke's residence one evening.

"I've got him," she said, in an undertone.

"Whom, pray?"

"My husband."

"Ah!" chuckled the Duke. "I knew your sage little head would hit upon something! Well, what is it, ma belle?"

"He is at the head of a conspiracy, whose aim is to put an end to the rule of the Germans—to overthrow you, and place upon the throne the Grand Duchess Elizabeth, who scarcely conceals her Russian sympathies."

"The devil!" exclaimed the Duke, pacing the floor. "Have you the proofs?"

"Incontestably!"

With this she handed the Duke some papers, which, when the latter had carefully read them, convinced him of the truth of the accusation.

A few minutes later the two separated, and half an hour afterwards the duke mounted his horse, placed himself at the head of two regiments, and was not tranquil until all the conspirators were arrested and in his power.

In 1739 the cold weather set in much earlier than usual, and in Russia it was of unprecedented severity. The birds dropped dead in the air. Every morning some sentinels were found frozen at their posts. No one dared to leave his house alone during the night. The extraordinary thickness of the ice inspired the Duke of Courlande to offer the world an unexpected and altogether new spectacle.

He had constructed on the surface of the Neva, an ice palace which recalled the tales of the Orient. They began the construction in the first days of November, under the direction of a chamberlain, by name of Falitscheff, and the strange structure had already reached a considerable height, when the ice began suddenly to give way under this enormous burden.

In the month of December the Duke ordered the ice palace to be rebuilt on terra firma, between the Admiralty fort and the Winter Palace of the present day. In the latter part of January, 1740, it was almost finished. The ice stones, so to speak, were cut in the Neva, like in quarries; then they were transported and fitted to each other according to the rules of the trade. Only, instead of mortar, they made use of the river water, which froze by degrees, and fastened solidly these strangely wrought stones.

This palace was fifty-two feet in length, sixteen in width and twenty in height. The roof, likewise of ice, weighed heavily upon the walls.

It was the evening of January 21. A magnificent sleigh, having the form of a swan, and drawn by three black horses, approached from the Admiralty fort.

Wrapped from head to foot in a purple velvet

table service, the glasses, everything, in fine, was of ice, worked up, turned, carved and painted with as much art, and in as many lively colors as Sevres porcelain.

But the astonishment of Mme. Wolinski reached its height when she saw the fireplace in which lay some ice wood, which, steeped in naphtha, seemed to burn in reality. And she thought she was dreaming when she discovered a magnificent bed, with tester, and whose ice curtains, with open work, resembled precious Brussels lace.

On leaving this enchanted palace the Duke conducted Alexina to the ice pyramids, on whose vertices rose lanterns, lighted inside, printed with grotesque figures, and turning by themselves. Be-

"Even if I tell you," said the Duke, with a strange smile, "that it is the conspirators whom you have assisted in discovering that I am going to punish thus? Even if I add that Wolinski, your dearly beloved husband, is going to play the principal part in this little entertainment?"

"Wolinski!" exclaimed Alexina, whose steel blue eyes began to sparkle all at once, while her little white teeth showed themselves. "Duke, you are adorable, and I should really like to kiss you!"

"Then you will remain?"

"You ask me!"

At a sign from the Duke the victims were brought forward, all shivering with mortal agony in the face of the frightful fate that awaited them.

pelisse, lined and trimmed with beaver, a Cossack's cap of the same fur on her powdered hair of a dazzling whiteness. Mme. Wolinski sat in the middle of this sleigh, buried, lost in several bear skins.

The driver stopped near the ice palace. Alexina, riding herself quickly of the skins that enveloped her, jumped nimbly into the snow and directed her steps toward the entrance to the fantastic monument, whose strange aspect threw her into raptures.

The embrasures of the doors and windows were designed in an antique style. Above the main door spread a magnificent frontispiece covered with exquisite sculptures. On either side, bordering on the roof, ran a gallery, whose quadrangular columns of the corners and the pillars had been cut and turned in blocks of the same congealed fluid.

Alexina, likewise of ice, surrounded the palace. Of ice, also, were two dolphins, which, placed at the entrance, ejected from their jaws flames of naphtha. Beside the dolphins stood six threatening pieces of artillery, also cut out of immense blocks of ice.

Suddenly Alexina perceived her friend and made haste to join him.

The Duke, in high black boots, white riding trousers and a short pelisse of green velvet, bowed gracefully before Mme. Wolinski, taking off his cocked hat, adorned with white feathers.

"What a surprise!" he said in German. "You are the first one to do me the honor of coming to see me and contemplate this wonder, which is scarcely finished. Don't you wish to examine the interior?"

"Why, yes, certainly," replied Mme. Wolinski, taking the arm of the handsome cavalier.

They entered, and traversed first a little vestibule. On either side were to be seen two little rooms perfectly furnished. Nothing was wanting there but the ceiling; but it was not needed, and one could see the better the blue light of the moon sifted by the transparent and sparkling roof.

The Duke called Alexina's attention to the glazed casements of plates of ice, as thin and transparent as the finest glass. Hundreds of candles burned in the candlesticks and candelabras of ice, placed before gigantic pier glasses, which filled the vast space with a light like that of day. All the furniture, the tables, the clocks, the divans, the footstools, the chairs, the cupboards, the buffet, with its rich tween these pyramids and the palace they had placed boxes containing exotic plants, orange trees, fir trees with birds in the branches, the whole of ice. By the light of this fairy illumination all these objects sparkled like diamonds. To the right Alexina noticed an enormous white elephant, carrying a person upon its back. During the day this colossal animal made water spurt from its trunk. During the night the water was replaced with burning naphtha, as for the dolphins. To the left a bathing room had been built, according to the Russian custom, and which, moreover, could be heated.

These facts are historical.

Precisely at the moment when the Duke was retiring, still giving his arm to the young woman, an officer approached him, and made to the all powerful lord a communication, which the latter received with evident satisfaction.

"My dear Alexina," he said, "you have come just in time to witness a spectacle which will be as unique in its kind as this palace is. In order to finish the decoration of it I still need a few statues. All the attempts I have made with ice having failed, I have had the happy idea to replace, in part, the ice with living men."

"How so?" asked Mme. Wolinski, with an artless air.

"It's very simple," replied the Duke, with a diabolical smile. They will be forced to assume attitudes indicated by the artists, and water from the Neva will be poured over their whole body, until they are metamorphosed into statues of ice."

"Oh, but that's horrible!" murmured Mme. Wolinski. "These unfortunate will be dead before their transformation!"

"No, my goddess. The figures would not have the purity of lines and roundness and sympathy of contours that correspond with the laws of beauty. They will continue to cover them with water so long as they are alive. Those who succumb in the course of the operation will not be used—that's all!"

"I believe," said Alexina, "that my blood would congeal in my veins if I saw, in this terrible and murderous cold, icy water poured on living men."

"Oh! why so?" asked the Duke, smiling. "Wrapped up, as we are, in superb and warm furs, we can enjoy this curious sight without any danger."

"No, no!" said Alexina, holding out her hand to the Duke. "I must leave you."

"I beg of you, Duke, let me command the attitude that Wolinski must assume."

"I surrender him into your hands."

A gesture from the Duke, and the unfortunate man was led before his wife.

"On your knees!" ordered the heartless woman. And as Wolinski did not obey, two executioners brutally forced him to kneel.

She surveyed him a moment with insolent coldness; then, addressing the Duke:

"He looks well thus, does he not?" she queried, in a mocking tone.

The Duke bowed by way of assent.

Then they began to pour torrents of icy water upon the wretched doomed man. All began to utter groans and curses. Wolinski alone remained mute.

"Do you still adore me?" Alexina asked her husband. "Are you still jealous?"

He made no answer; but, a feeble groan having escaped him, his inhuman wife burst out laughing.

"They are killing them," said one of the soldiers of the guard to his comrade, "because they wanted to deliver us from the hateful rule of the strangers. But patience, the day of vengeance will come!"

At last the cruel work was finished.

The ice statues were placed before the palace, and the tyrant could contemplate them with satisfaction.

The ice palace was now complete indeed!

The soldier of the guard had prophesied right. The day of vengeance had come. On the night of December 5, 1741, the regiment of the Preobrajanski guard gave the signal of the revolt. After the death of the German sovereign they no longer wished to see a German on the throne, the son of the Duke of Brunswick. Soon the Tobolsk regiment followed the example of the guard. The Grand Duchess Elizabeth, daughter of Peter the Great, and the leader of the Russian party, with her faithful partisan, the French physician, Lestock, put themselves at the head of the troops, who proclaimed Elizabeth empress.

The Duke of Courlande had been overthrown a short time after the death of Ann, and banished to Peïm.

In her turn Alexina was smitten with a well merited punishment. She received the knout, and was exiled to Siberia, where she died of consumption after two years of penance, and perhaps of repentance.

FISHING.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY JAMES BUCKHAM.

Alder fish pole, six feet long—
Looked quite straight as growing;
Home made fish line, good and strong—
Used for harness sewing;
Hook ma gave me, that she found
Sticking in pa's trousers;
Worms I dug out o' the ground—
My! but they were rousers!

So I went a-fishing, down
In the white birch chopping;
Waded—me and Luther Brown—
Got our breeches sopping!
But the trout they bit like Sam—
Just came up a-flying,
Grabbed the worm—and then ker-slam!
On the bank were lying.

Feller came along, and said
"Twant the way to take 'em,
Ought to let 'em play, instead—
Not haul back and snake 'em.
'Lowed he'd show us how to do,
With his little feather;
Fished all day, and just caught two.
Laid it to the weather!

Coming back, with pockets fat,
Me and Luther found him,
Fighting skeeters with his hat—
'Bout a million 'round him.
Feller said there want no trout
In that dratted hollow;
Cussed his luck—and bought us out
For a silver dollar!

GEORGIA WELLES

Is a Chicago girl, who very early in life made up her mind to go upon the stage. In fact, it is related that she took part in amateur theatricals at the age of five years. School life, however, prevented her from realizing her hopes for a few years thereafter, but at the age of sixteen, when she graduated from college, she began the study of dramatic art in Boston. She received instruction for only one year, however, and then became a member of a Western repertory company, in which she gained much experience through the work assigned her in standard plays. She was naturally fitted for ingenué work, and eventually won great credit in a role of this sort which she played in Edward Owings Towne's comedy, "By Wits Outwitted." Miss Welles recently appeared in this city, in Sadie Martinot's production of "The Passport," and made an excellent impression therein. She is very petite, of remarkably pleasing appearance, and has considerable magnetism. She is earnest in her work, and her future is bright with promise.

IVORY BILLIARD BALLS.

How They are Made and Prepared for the Market.

When in the factory the tusks are carefully examined by an expert, to detect any possible flaws or cracks that may exist, for, besides the dangers to the ivory from careless handling while in transit, the original possessor of the ivory is by no means so careful of his tusks as he ought to be, considering their value, and, with the utmost disregard of the precious material of which they are composed, uses them for fighting, for uprooting small trees, and stumps, for overturning stones and for grubbing in the ground, without any very definite purpose that is apparent to the human observer.

Of course, he often splits his tusks, and a very minute crack, hardly discernible to the eye, will seriously impair the value of a long and beautiful piece of ivory. If the crack is extensive the tusk must be devoted to another purpose than that of making billiard balls, but, supposing the tusk to be found perfect, it is passed on to another expert, who measures it and marks it at proper distances to be cut into blocks.

It is then sawed into lengths of 2½ to 3 inches, according to the size of the balls to be made, and the resulting blocks are passed on into the hands of the turners. Turning lathes of unusual accuracy and delicacy are put to work and the ivory sawdust begins flying in all directions. Not to be lost, however, ivory is too precious to be wasted. Every speck of the dust is carefully gathered up at the end of each day's work. When a sufficient quantity has been accumulated it is treated with chemicals, and by means of a peculiar cement and the use of a hydraulic press is molded into a compact and apparently homogeneous mass. From this are manufactured many small articles, which present all the appearance of ivory, and are in reality such, though not in its original state.

On account of the value of the material, the utmost care is used in the cutting, and the cylindrical shape of the blocks enables an economy that would not be suspected. Every one has seen ivory martingale rings, but every one does not know that these come from the two ends of the ivory block that is being turned into shape for a billiard ball. They are cut out with as much care as the ball itself, and afterward rounded and polished with the same scrupulous attention.

The ball itself, after being roughly turned, is laid aside for at least six months to season and harden, for the ivory, when freshly cut, is very soft, or, at least, very much softer than it afterwards becomes, and when the seasoning is properly effected the turning is completed, and the polishing, at first by a very ingenious machine, is continued with prepared chalk and chamols, then with the leather alone, and finally completed with the bare palms of the operator.

The ball is now finished, so far as the mechanical processes of manufacture are concerned, and passed on to the wholesale and retail dealers, but the risk is by no means ended when the work is done, for few materials are so sensitive to atmospheric and temperature changes as ivory, and at almost any moment the ball may become lessened in value by the appearance on its surface of tiny cracks or flaws. If these are superficial they impair only the looks of the ball, but sometimes they extend far into the interior, and the ball will then break in two or chip with rough usage.

Miscellaneous

Eau Claire.—The Barnes-Maying Dramatic company has just completed a tour of the state, to occupy the Grand week of May 6. "The Black Rock" was the attraction. 15. Nielson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" group were favored with good business. 27. Ellen May and members of the company have been visiting here at the home of her manager, V. Thurne. Miss May will shortly leave for England. . . . The musical performance by the local "Toll Co." will be given at the Grand, under the management of Lessee Boringame, starting June 26. The special scenery secured for the performance has been the best of the kind. The company intend to make a short tour of the principal cities of the state.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Wheeling.—Wheeling's first Summer opera season will begin June 3, when the Robinson Opera Company will open for two weeks' run at the Wheeling Park Casino. Six performances will be given each week, four nights and two matinees. Popular prices will prevail throughout the engagement, which promises to be a very successful one.

THE ANACONDA outing of the Wheeling of Elks, 27, at Wheeling Park, was a most successful affair. Marie Wainwright and her excellent company presented "An Unequal Match" and "Daughters of Eve" to two large audiences. The outing this season was under the direct management of the Elks, and the company was paid for the mastery they won at which the undertaking was managed.

MAUSONS PARK.—The free vaudeville performances here attract many visitors. The people appearing this week are Harry Burdworth, Frank Kenno, Annie May Nelson, and the "Toll Co."

NOTES.—The Marie Wainwright Co. closed the season here 26, the members returning to New York. . . . Myra Collins, who has been spending a few days at her home in this city, left for Kansas City, where she will remain until the opening of Marks Bros. season.

WASHINGTON.

Seattle.—At the Seattle Theatre Clark and Cunningham will give another production of "Alloons" June 3, after which the house will remain dark for some weeks.

CORDELLA'S THEATRE.—Annemie Goodrich began a week's engagement 26, in "The Romp," to a crowded house. She will change the bill nightly. The Higgins-Walton Co. did a big business week of 19, with "Burr Oaks" and "Venice." The New York Theatre Co. did a good business, which brought to this city D. K. Stevens' "Injured Innocence," which was well received.

MAUSONS PARK.—The vaudeville houses to draw big crowds. Next people this week: HARRY ARTHUR, Elsie Oatman, Dave Montgomery and the Olsen Sisters.

THE NEW YORK THEATRE.—The house for July 12, was a big one. The company will be in the city for July 12.

MANAGER W. Z. CLARK will shortly leave for the East as a delegate to Grand Lodge of Stage Employees Union, and also as a member of the Grand Lodge of T. M. A.

"The Secret Service."

This four act romantic drama, by William Gillette, had its first production on any stage at the Broad Street Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., May 13, 1895. The plot is as follows: Richmond, Va., is besieged by the Union forces, and two brothers named Dumont, in the secret service, penetrate the Southern lines. One is taken prisoner, but the other succeeds in entering the Confederate service under the name of Captain Ralph Chaffoner. He is received in the family of General Varney, where he makes love to the daughter, Lillian, for the purpose of aiding his schemes, but soon comes to love her in earnest, Benton Arrelsford, a Southern detective, and the removes the bullets from the guns, and Lillian, obtaining permission to go to the front, tells the general of her plan. He tells her of it, and how he may escape by pretending to drop dead when fired upon; but, as she is now convinced of his treachery, she refuses to give him any word of hope. He is then shot, and she is left to wonder what has been done; the ball cartridges are replaced, and he is about to be led to execution, when General Chandler arrives and arrests the traitor. The general then tells her that the telegraph operator testifies that Chalmers did not send the forged dispatch. Then, in the name of the President, he pardons her, and she is free to go. The general tells her that in future he remain a non-combatant. This offer he is about to refuse, when the hand of his sweetheart steadies him, and he accepts. Following is the cast: Capt. Ralph Chalmers, Maurice Barrymore; Benton Armstrong, William H. Crane; General Chandler, George F. Stone; Major Edmund Arden, Dr. Garnet, R. F. McLaughlin; Henry Dumont, M. L. Alop; Jones, T. E. Jackson; Lillian Varney, Edna May; General Armstrong, J. H. Hopper; Gen. Varney, Ida Vernon; Martha, Alice Leigh; Eleanor Fairfax, Elaine Edson; Mrs. Kittredge, Lulu Hopper; Miss Farrington, Mita Brittain.

"Little Bill's Sweetest"

A comedy drama, in five acts, by Frank L. Bixby.

was acted, for the first time on any stage. May's, at Marshalltown, Ia., by the Bixby-Gilkinson New York Stock Co. The story tells of a six year old boy, Little Phil Ware, who is stolen by a party of smugglers. They carry him off on their schooner, in the hopes of getting a ransom from his father, a wealthy New York lawyer. The smugglers also carry off Madge, a girl of sixteen, who has been adopted by Phil's parents, and who is devoted to him. The smugglers sail away, and the action of Act 3 takes place on board the vessel as it lies at anchor near an island in the Atlantic Ocean, which is the headquarters of the band of smugglers. The parents of the boy have organized a pursuing party, who come aboard of the schooner looking for the children, but Little Phil and Madge are so successfully concealed by their abductors, that the searching party can get no clue of them, and leave the vessel. The smugglers are elated at this, and grow careless while the children are being taken to the land. To obtain his mate and the children, Madge succeeds in locking the smugglers in the cabin, and with Little Phil capas from the vessel in the only boat it possesses. A-cove shows both the smugglers and the pursuers hungry for the children on the island, near which the schoone had been anchored. The children are finally discovered by the captain of the smugglers and a struggle ensues on a rocky point overhanging the water. This is interrupted by the appearance of a negro servant, who has been legal in charge of the steam launch in which the pursuing party came from their vessel to the island. The negro shoots the captain, who falls from the rocky point into the water. The last act shows the family reunited at their home and on the eve of a party to be given in Madge's honor, and during this act her parentage is discovered and she proves to be the niece and heiress of a rich old and wealthy friend of the family. Madge elects to stay with the people who adopted her and the play closes with her declaration that she will continue to be Little Phil's sweetheart until he finds another. The cast includes: Madge, Jessie West; Florence Ware, Helen Desmond; Mrs. Neal, Viola Crosby; Theophilus Prince, Maurice Drew; Tom Record, E. L. Snader; Jack Burns, Neil Scully; Walter Ware, John Fenton; Wilso Downs, W. D. Stone; Robert Neal, Geo. F. Bird; Alfred Norton, Douglas Atherton; Jerry Lance, Geo. J. Secord; James Mayberry, E. L. Snader; Little Phil Ware, Little Annie Inman.

THE IRVINGTON-MILBURN RACE.

The Big Event Won by Right-Monte Scott the Chief Time-Price Winner.

Not far from twenty thousand persons are stated to have put in an appearance at the annual road race over the Irvington Millburn course, a stretch of two and a half miles between Irvington and Millburn, N. J., on Decoration Day May 30. The weather was clear and hot, and the road was in splendid condition, so that a breaking of former records was reasonably anticipated; but, although a number of fast riders were included in the one hundred and seventeen starters, the contest did not result in any improvement on former performances. The winner was Alvin Smith, who did the five miles F. G. Smith, Walter Hegeman and Lewis Kunz led in 13m. 13s. This finished the first five miles very strong, in 13m. 40s, five seconds faster.

than last year's time. He was paced by young "Black". After the first five miles Scott and Barnett began to gain on Titus. At ten miles the two were within 200 yds. of the leader. They were followed by F. W. Richt and S. Standlee. At fifteen miles Simpson Standlee led in 4m. 25s., with Richt and Smith of Bloomfield second and third, respectively. The pace began to fell on a number of the horses, and at 20 miles Simpson Standlee was leading in 2m. 45s. S. Standlee, F. J. Smith, J. F. Roehr, J. H. Spencer and J. Gregory followed Richt closely, but the Brooklyn men mortified their lead with ease. At 25 miles the close margin was 100 yds., with Richt winning by about two feet. Titus finished ten miles in 2m. 55s. The first fifteen men finished as follows:

W. J. TOTTEN, the Karatoga County champion, won the annual seven mile road race of the Karatoga (N. Y.)
Wheel Club, May 30. He was handicapped at 150, and

The annual race meet of the Albany County Wheelmen will be held at Ridgeland on June 5. All the crack Class A and B men are entered.

second round the latter injured his left hand quite badly, and in the eighteenth hurt his right. He was lucky, however, and continued to face the music up to the thirty-sixth round, at the end of which his backers, in order to save a game man from additional punishment, threw up the sponge, and Dixon was declared the winner.

STANK MACIEWSKI, of Cincinnati, and Johnny Lavack, Cleveland, O., fought a twenty five round battle before Metropolitan Athletic Club, of Wheeling, W. Va., May 9, for $200. Havack had the best of it all through the fight, and the sound of the gong saved Maciewski from a knock out several times. In the last round he was very groggy, but kept up bravely until the finish, when the contest was declared a draw.

LESLIE PRAXIS obtained a decision over Stanton Abbott in a twenty round "go" at the Suffolk Athletic Club, Boston, Mass., June 3. The fight had a hot heat of the closing round, but his work did not offset that of Praxis in the preceding rounds, and he was given the verdict.

JACK DAVIS and Gus Gorman, who, previously noted, were arrested at "Fidelity" Club, where they were fighting, were recently convicted of the offense in the District Court.

THE SUPREME COURT at New Orleans, La., on June 3 refused a rehearing in the case of the Olympic Club, in which eight fights were declared illegal. This settles the sport in the Crescent City.

BOB MARSHALL is requested by his cousin, David E. Marshall, to send his present address to this office, or communicate with him at Ward's Island, N. Y. H. Ward 6.

Sailing on the Sound.

The Harlem Yacht Club's course on Long Island Sound, was, on May 30, the scene of the twelfth annual regatta of that organization, and fully eight hundred persons witnessed the sport. For the first time the regatta was open to outside clubs, and as a consequence the event was made more interesting by the presence of more than a hundred yachts of all designs. The boats were divided into twelve classes, and sailed a course measuring twenty miles for the first division and nineteen miles for the remainder of the divisions. The race, which began at 11 a. m., resulted as follows:

F. S. G. D'HAVREUIL of the New York Yacht Club has purchased in Glasgow, Scot., the steel steam yacht Zeta, and will bring her over as she can be fitted for the voyage.

JOHN J. MATTHEWS has been appointed receiver of the Arthur Kill Rowing Association, of Elizabeth, which is bankrupt. The club's property is estimated to be worth $50,000.

THE NEW YORK Yacht Club was compelled to postpone its regatta, scheduled for June 1, because of a lack of sufficient wind. It goes over for a month.

THE PASSAGE REGATTA.

Crack Oarsmen of the East Contend for Honors.

The Passage Regatta Association held its annual regatta May 30, ten thousand persons lining the bank of the famous course on the Passaic River, at Newark, N. J. The Fairmounts, of Philadelphia, Pa., furnished the surprise of the day in their defeat of the Tritons in the senior eight oared race. The distance in the single races was changed from one mile and a half, as heretofore, to one mile, thus making the course nearly straight. The eight oared events were contested over a mile and a half course, as usual. The races were fairly interesting, chief interest centering in the junior eight oared shell race. Summary:

THE GREATEST COMEDY HIT IN YEARS, A FATTED CALF

Wm. Gill's Masterpiece. Author of "Adonis," "Old Jed Prouty," "Rising Generation," Etc.

Wm. Gill's three act musical domestic comedy, "A Fatted Calf," which was produced last night, scored a distinct success. From start to finish, the large audience was convulsed with laughter over the complications of three secret marriages. The comedy is skillfully constructed, and the lines are witty and bright. It is by far the best piece Gill has written, and will have a long life.—N. Y. WORLD, April 16, 1905.

The three act domestic musical comedy, "A Fatted Calf," from the pen of William Gill, and positively his best production, was brought out before a crowded house last night. This is by all odds the cleverest play of its kind ever seen, and ought to have the longest run of any play ever seen in New York city. It is not marred by coarse horseplay and coarser jokes, but, on the contrary, is clean, pure and refined.—DAILY ADVERTISER, Newark, April 16, 1905.

Last evening a very large audience witnessed the first presentation of "A Fatted Calf," by William Gill. This certainly is the best of all plays Mr. Gill has written, and we must say in our judgment it is by far the best comedy produced in a great many years, and will have the longest life.—NEWARK EVENING NEWS, April 16, 1905.
